Horizontal, Repeating, & Plain Watches.

The virtue and utility of WATCH JE WELLING is obvious to all Watch-makers, and has been practifed by the most eminent of them since the discovery; but they never extended this valuable improvement any further than in jewelling the last and swiftest moving wheel, commonly in jewelling the laft and swiftest moving wheel, commonly called the balance. GEORGE MONRO, Watch-maker and Watch-jeweller, in Canongate-head, Edinburgh, has found out a method of extending this invention to three more of the swiftest moving wheels of the watch, by which means only the state of the watch, by which means the state of the watch, but we watch the watch the state of the watch the wa only the advantages and excellence of that fine invention can be known. By this principle, they measure time with much more exactinefs, and will go double or trible the time without cleaning, than a watch made upon the common principle of brass buthes; therefore, a most valuable improvement when applied to repeating watches; as they not only go better, but faves the expence of taking them often to pieces; as it is a very fine piece of mechanism, they are in danger of fiftering, by being often taken to pieces. This new invention can be applied to any fine watch with the same propriety as if made so from the beginning. Watches improved in this manner, are nobly adapted for gentlearden going long voyages, and ship-matters, who should have the finest of watches. As a demonstration of what is here advanced, the shid George Monro has a fine plain Gold Watch. the advantages and excellence of that fine invention aneit of watches. As a demonstration of what is here advanced, the faid George Monro has a fine plain Gold Watch, as above described, ready for fale.—Good old watches, made by noted watch-makers, can have this new improvement applied to them; by which means they will be made to measure time with much more exactness then they did when first made.

en and Gentlemen that please to favour the faid Robiemen and Gentlemen that please to ravour the law George Monro with their employment, may depend upon being ferred with the greatest care and dispatch. — George Monro also returns his most grateful acknowledgments to those Noblemen and Gentlemen who have already been pleased to favour him with their employment in this way.

FROM THE LONDON PAPERS, Feb. 19. Kinghon, Jamaica, Dec. 6. We are now en-We are now en-Commodore, with his foundron, actually left this island in great difgust; and the following is, as w understand from a respectable quarter, a full and accurate account of that business. When the Spanith thips entered the harbour, they paid the proper respect to the British flag, by lowering their topgal-lant-fails, and striking their pendants, as they paslant-fails, and striking their pendants, as they pas-fed the Europa, and then came to an anchor; but about nine o'clock the fame evening, after the gun was fired from our lag ship, another was discharged from the Santa Maria; upon which the officer was sent in a boat from the Europa, to enquire of the Spanish Commodore what could be the meaning of such a procedure, directly in the sace of his Majes-try's slag, and in one of his ports; to which Don O'Brien said, in substance, it was his evening gun which was fired; a ceremony which he intended to continue, both morning and evening, so long as he-staid at Port-Royal.

When the officer, who had been dispatched to washe the enquiry, delivered his answer to Captain Valhan, the latter gentleman thought proper to proceed on board the Santa Maria in person, and persemptorily forbid Commodore O'Brien from repeating the ceremony, under pain of being fired upon, except he produced a written order " for the affumption of fuch equality," from Commodore Gard-ner himself. The Spanish commander then replied, ner himself. The Spanish commander then replied, that he should not receive orders from Captain Vashon, but would persist in his intention, except. Commodore Gardner prevented him, by signifying his express disapprobation in writing, which he should lay before the King his master.

This induced Captain Vashon to fend an express to the commander in chief, with an account of the whole transaction, who, it feems, with a genuine British spirit, actually wrote to the Spanish commander, that if he continued the ceremony of siring, wither in the marriag or exprise. he must suddenly either in the morning or evening, he mult fuddenly leave the harbour, or his Britannic Majesty's offiof the kind could be permitted upon any pretence

This happened on Tuelday night, norwithltanding which Don O'Brien, in compliance with a previous engagement, actually dined at Commodore Gardner's pen on Wednefday, where he was treated with great hospitality and politeness, and next morning failed from Port Royal in such unaccountable haste, that several of his officers, and about eighteen private seamen, were left behind, the latter of whom are provided for on board the Europa, until they find an opportunity of following their conservmen.

Countrymen.

Though the fullen and haughty temper of Mr O'Brien might have been exceedingly galled by Commodore Gardner's laudable spirit, on a late oc eafion; yet the etiquette of our navy should con-stantly be afferted and supported at all hazards, ef-pecially in our own ports; or our gallant naval com-manders and invincible seamen have fought, bled, und conquered to no purpole.

We hear it is in contemplation at Oxford, to e-red an equefirian flatue of his Majefly in the quadrangle in the febools, or in fome public part of the University, to perpetuate the memory of the distinguished honour done to the University by our gra-

The following is the exact state and strength of the British squadron, stationed in the Mediterranean for the protection of trade, and as a steet of observation, fince the exchange which has lately taken place: — Trufty, of 50 gues, Commodore P. The troubles in France, and the troubles in Holland, all tend to the advantage of this country. The failure of the Paymaster of the navy in Paris has occasioned so great distress in the commercial world, that the best bills in Paris are done at 7, 8, nay, to per cent, difcount. As to the Dutch, many of the first families are coming to settle among us, which must tend to support our funds. A bill for naturalizing a Dutch gentleman of professional rank is expected to be brought into the Lords in a few days, and it is imagined more bills of the same kind will follow it. Wednesday there was held at the Marine Society's Office, in Bishopsgate-street, a meeting of the mer-India trade, agreeable to a public notice given by the Secretary.

The purpose of the meeting was to take into confideration a letter from Mr Pitt, in confequence of the resolutions of the last meeting which were transmitted to that Gentleman.

Mr Pitt's letter was read by the Secretary. Is it Mr Pitt informed the meeting, that he had confidered their resolutions, but did not conceive that it was necessary to reduce the duties upon rum more than three pence per gallon—that he intended to make a motion in the House of Commons, in confequence of the Commercial Treaty, that the duries on brandy should be 7 s. per gasion; and it was thought that hereafter it must be found necessary to reduce the duties upon brandy still further, in order to suppress sunggling the more effectually, and a proportionable reduction on rum would take place and concluded with saying, that he stould be happy to receive any further instructions or information from the Committee.

A conversation then took place, on account of some expressions in Mr Pitt's letter faid to be ambiguous, but it was unanimously agreed that his letter contained a flat denial of the request or proposition which the Committee had made, viz. that the duty upon rum should be reduced five-pence per gallon.

The meeting was very numerous, and, from the conversation, it appeared to be the general opinion, that every encouragement ought to be given to the confumption of rum in this country; and that any additional imposts, or any alteration in the duties, which gave a preference, in point of cheapness, to brandy, would operate very unfavourable against the interests of the merchants here, and particularly the planters in the West India islands.

The recall of the Prussan Ambassador from Holland, and the manner of doing it, will probably speak souder in the ears of Dutch patriots than his actual remonstrances did. Perhaps too the shock may reach Verfailles somewhat disagreeably, as the Grand Monarch is not in one of his warlike fits, and perhaps his Treasury not in a warlike

The brewers, coopers, draymen, &c. are to appear before the Royal vifitors in new apparel aracteritie of their different employments.

One of the feverest farcasius, perhaps, that was his late celebrated speech. In pointing out the con-tradictions that appeared between the relation of the transactions with the Begums, given by Mr Pla-ftings in 1781, and the defence delivered at the bat of the House in 1786, "which of them (said) Mr Sheridan) shall we believe?—shall we suppose that Mr Hastings spoke truth in 1781, and fashiood in 1786?—shall we infer the converse of this statement, or shall we believe that Mr Haffige never fpake truth in his life !" Proceeding then to point out feveral other contradictions, equally grofs, but true, "Let me paufe, (faid the orator) it is possible I may pursue this reasoning roo far . I may fo far depreciate the restimony of Mr Hashings, that he may be no longer confidered; as a jufficient evidence, even against himself.

CHAMBER OF MANUFACTURES

The representatives of the great manufacturing bodies in this kingdom, held another general meeting on Saturday last, at their Chamber in Fenchurch

JOSIAH WEDGEWOOD, Efq: in the Chair. five Refolutions, to which the worthy Chairman affented; each of them went to their disapprobation of the treaty between England and France. have, therefore, been a very ill-natured and unjust report, that Mr Wedgwood ever approved of the treaty. These resolutions, and a long and exetllent vindication of himself, amply proved it. He is a atriotic character, and ought not to be vilified.

The members opinions were, that by the minifter's evalve condust, they plainly perceived that our Portuguese trade was sacrificed to France, as well as our Spanish trade. They declared, that France must four become what Britain is at prefent, the greatest commercial nation on earth, while Britain could never regain her prefent functionity's unless ministers could be immediately checked, England was irretrievably undone. Amongst many articles of trade that would be injured, they mentioned every fort that was subject to the Excise Laws. Although the importation and inland duties, said they, were to be equal, yet the French goods paid their importation duty in a finished state, while jours, after paying the duty, were often not mished for a year after. Thus we lost a twelvemonth's afe of our money, while our new and fincere friends, the French, received back their importation duty in a few days afterwards at our own market ! Guns and piftols, coaches and carriages of all kinds, wi h many other articles that are composed of various pieces, could be put together, and finished in France The inference drawn far cheaper than in Fngland. was, that those goods would be commissioned over in an unfinished state to France, and afterwards finished there, for our own and their market.

But what they most loudly deprecated was, what did honour to them as mich, the annihilation of female industry, and of confequence female virtue. This was effected by lowering the duties on these rticles that compose female drofs. Although, fays one, there are far from equalling, even when united, anoft or all of our great staples, yet as they are the combined staple of the whole semale fex, in the middling ranks of life, by enabling them to tread the path of virtue, it was perdition in the light of man, path of virtue, it was perdition in the light of man, and the most heinous facrilege in the fight of the Divinity, to devote many thousands of the British fair to poverty and prolititution, by the millinery clause in this pernicious treaty. Mr Pitt's unguarded expression of Monday last, that it would not be attended with the atter extirpation of the milinery and mantua-making businesses, was universally reprobated, as being impolitic, anjust, unfeeling, and UNMANLY ! The meeting broke up at five, and ad-

HOUSE OF COMMONS. " In confequence of the order of the day being for receiving the report of the Commercial Treaty with France, a very full House and gallery appeared at a very early hour, and amongst the strangers were the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland, Lord Walfingham, and others.

At three o'clock the Speaker took the chair, and a new writ was ordered in the room of George Johnstone, Efq; who has accepted of the Chiltern

Hundreds.

After some private business in course, the House waited nearly three quarters of an hour for Mr Pitt, who so fooner entered the House than "Mr Hamilton rose, and, in a thort speech, trusted, that as Sir Elijah Impey was ordered to the bar, no motion would be made against Mr Hattings on

"Mr Burke spoke in reply, and signified, that by and bye he should have something to say on the subject of the next charge against Mr Hastings, and feemed to acquiesce in what the Hon. Gentleman had faid, which he admitted to be but fair and reafonable, and agreeable to the general sule of proceeding in all courts of judicature.

COMMERCIAL TREATY.

The order of the day being called for, Mr

Beaufay brought up the report of the Commercial Treaty, which was read, article by article, a first time; but, upon the Speaker's moving a second reading,

"Mr Sheridan rose, and, in a very long speech, made a variety of objections. He said he underflood that the House were in a few days to be moved to address the King on the treaty, and that the confolidation of the Cultoms and Excise was meant to be mixed with, and to make part of the treaty. Mr Sheridan wished to know if this really was to be; and if it was, he thought it would be very improper, as the carrying an address on the treaty as now flood would preclude any farther confideration of it; and he apprehended that there were mamy confiderations that might yet be had respecting it. Mr Sheridan wished also to know, if, by the treaty, the French ports would be opened for goods, &c. brought there in Irish bottoms, and whether the kingdom of Ireland was or was not included in the treaty, and to be held in the fame relation, with regard to it, as Great Britain. The Hon. man expatiated a long while on these points, and adverted to many articles of the treaty; but these two questions were the only ones he deduced from his arguments, and to these he pressed the Minister, with great earnestness, to reply with that candour and fairness that became a Minister.

Mr Grenville faid, there was no doubt but that the ports of France would be open to the thips of Ireland, provided the Parliament of Ireland should agree with Great Britain in the various articles of the Treaty

" Mr Sheriden was not fatisfied with this, but called on the Minister to answer the questions he had put.

Mr Pitt rofe and faid, the Hon. Gentleman was certainly mistaken as to any future confiderations there might be respecting the French Treaty. For his part, he knew of none. The Right Hon. Gent. made fome observations on the other pass of Mr Sheridan's speech, but by no means to his fatisfac-

" A very defultory conversation now ensued, of more mixed, and, if we may presume to offer our opioion, more unintelligible nature, than we ever re-menber to have withefied in Parliament. The Minitter and Mr Sheridan had astually replied three or four times to each other, before Mr Pitt either could, or would allow himself to understand what the queltions were, that Mr Sheridan wished him to answer; during which time, Mr Pitt accused Mr Sheridan of being angry with him without a cause, band impelending him for not answering questions he could not make him understand. He laid, the Hon. Gentleman was the fittest person in the world to give him instruction, he gave it in fo conciliating a way, and with fuch apparent fincerity and candour. Mr Sheridan, in return, faid, he trulled he had not shown any petulance, or behaved in a way at all ungracious; if he had, and if what he had faid, had made any impression on the Right Hon. Gentleman, so as to induce him to act with moderation in suture, he believed the whole House would thank him for if.

Rt length, Mr Sheridan was confessed to make himself clearly understood in his two questions, which he now (as the Minister faid) put into one, which was, whether Ireland was, or was nor, to be confidered the fame as Great Britain with regard to the French Treaty?

French Treaty?

"Mr Pitt answered, that if Ireland should a gree to the Treaty the same as Great Britain had, the certainly would be entitled to the same benefits.

"Mr Sheridan was not satisfied with this, and said that, notwithstanding what the Minister had thrown out, a separate Treaty between Ireland and France might be sound necessary.

"Mr Pitt repeated what he had said.

"Mr Sheridan replied, he knew very well-benefits.

44 Mr Sheridan replied, he knew very well that Ireland might object to the Treaty; but he question was this, " In the Treaty formed betweed Great " Britain and France, was Ireland included?" " Mr Fox took up the argument of his Hon. Friend, and contended, that I reland ought to have been included, and that the King of Great Britain ought to have answered for hor. Mr Pitt faid, that except in the article of brandy this had been the cafe.

"The Opposition cried ont, "In all the srichs of the taciff,"
Mr Pist rose again, and positively denied this, and said again, that except in the article of brand, and a few others, Ireland was included.

Mr Sheridan and Mr Fox disputed this, or the treaty was not to be understood.

Mr Pitt explained the treaty, by faying, that when Great Britain and France reciprocally themselves to each other (though Ireland was not mentioned) Ireland was included in the treay; and he again faid, " that brandy was the only strice " left open," and that it remained with Ireland whether fhe fhould or should not, by her con fland the fame with regard to that article as Greek Britain.

" At half past fix, Mr Welbore Eller was left fpeaking on the subject.

" The complaint which is to be heard on the 30th of March next, on the motion of Mr Adan ferve in Parliament for the county of Renfrew, was scaled and tested on the 26th day of June; this faid write was delivered to Charles Macdowall of Crichen, Efq; the Sheriff-depute of the faid county, on or before the 20 h day of July 1786; the the faid Sheriff, although frequently requested, in flead of naming an early and convenient day for the election of a member, to be held in pursuance of the faid writ, unnecessarily, and contrary to the dury of his office, delayed executing the same, by nor pro-ceeding to hold the election until the 19th of Ods-

From the first expresentation of " He wou'd be a Soldier" at our Theatre, little doubt was entertained of its becoming a favourite with the public, on account of its numerous excellencies. The very brilliant and crowded audiences which have attended the Theatre each of the three nights it has already been performed, afford the most convincing proof of the most convincing proof of its merit, and is a fufficient answer to any pecvish attack that may be made against it. When this play was first represented here, occasion was taken to say a few words in its praise. The writer of that article omitted then to mention the manner in which the characters were dreffed. Justice to the Manager would have warranted very high encomiums on this head, as few pieces have been got up where more tafte and elegance have been displayed. Indeed, his indefatigable attention to every department of the Stage is truly praise-worthy, and cannot fail of enluring to him the patronage and protection of a generous public, for whose entertainment he has pro-cured a company of performers superior in abilities to any now in Great Britain or Ireland, London,

COUNCIL CHAMBER,

EDINBURGH, FEBRUARY at. 1787.

THE following Representation was this day read in Countail, and the cooffideration thereof remitted to a Committee of their number. But as the same contains matters of very ferious concern to the Public, ordered the same to be published in the new-papers.

Unto the Right Honodrable the Lord Privass, Magistrates, and Town Council of the City of Edinburgh.

The REPRESENTIATION of the Committee of Managers of the Charity Work-bouse, appointed by the General Meeting of the 6th Schunary.

Humbly Servedth.

THAT, Avon the sell institution of the Charity Work-bouse, the Supplies, whether ordinary or extraorditary, about the fine policy of the Supplies, whether ordinary or extraorditary, about the fine policy of the Supplies, whether ordinary or extraorditary, about the first support, have not been sufficient for the purpose.

The House was opened in June 1743, and at the end of the year, a was found necessary to apply for a general extraordinary collection.—Another extraordinary collection was obtained in the year 1747, as also in the years 1752, 1758, 1756, 1769, 1779, 1779, 1779, 1779, 1783; and last of all in 1784. It appears, from the report of a Committee of the Magnitates, Stent-Mathers, and Managers, dated 23d, June 1775, that at an average taken for the eight preceding years, there had been an annual deficiency of 446 l. 19 s. 7 d. Steeling. Mr Forrest, the City's Accomptant, examined the biods of the House for thirteen years previous to the 10d of July 1785, and found the average deficiency for these years to be no less than 678 l. 9 d. Sterling. From all which 12th it appears, that the stated funds of the House in the high campachagement of the institution, been searly equal to the first campachagement of the institution, been searly equal to the fundamental funds of the House from the acceptance of the contrary, all the public contributions received since that thue, have been only sufficient to relieve the pressing necessary laws boat by the means to save the House from the acceptance of a have been only sufficient to relieve the pressing necessary laws boat of the term at which the year's accompts are adjusted, the debt of the House amounted to not less a sum than 3782 l. It shefe circumflances, there were 861 persons, men, women and children, who received their lodging and subsistence in the House, besides 121 out-pensioners, amounting in all to 984; and since that time the affairs of the House are full worse than before. By a report from the Mistress, just received, it appears, that the whole stock of bed and bedding, and the whole body linen, are in prefent use, in extreme bad repair; and, in a very sew weeks, these articles will be worn out, without either money or credit to replace them.

and the whole body linen, are in prefent use, in extreme bad repair; and, in a very sew weeks, these articles will be worn out, without either money or credit to replace them.

The Managers find themselves no longer able to struggle with these dissculties. They trust, that it will be found, upon examination, that they have endeavoured faithfully to conform to the regulations prescribed to them in the original constant far the management of the funds; and that the heavy load of debt with which the Hossie is now incumbered, has been gradually accommisting, from the descreacy of sunds for executing the purposes of that softrast, a desiciency which has been felt in every period from the very first inflication of and which, of late years, has been felt much more than ever, as the sunds have increased in no proportion to the advanced price of provisions, and the additional numbers admitted to the benefit of the charity, not to mention the yearly interest of the debts.

In this lituation, the Managers, must of, necessity resign their charge, unless some effectual supply be established. They shall be happy if any mode be positted out to them for supporting the Poor at a less expence than what is required by the preferst establishment, and a new contrast entured into authoriting them to adopt it. But unless an establishment, of see such other establishment, and a new contrast entured info authoriting them to adopt it. But unless an establishment, of see such other establishment as may be judged preferable, they are resolved to resign their charge on the 31st day of March next, when the prefers quarter ends.
